Air conditioning is essential for your comfort and can contribute to your safety. Its main purpose is to provide a comfortable environment inside your car, regardless of the outside temperature.

But, if your air conditioning system has been switched off for a while, who knows what it could be hiding? Condensation in the pipework combined with heat from the engine creates a breeding ground for bacteria and mould. And it's not just unpleasant odours you'll have to suffer, your health could also be affected with sore throats, sneezing and irritated eyes.

Also, a vehicle that has an inefficient air conditioning system uses more fuel, meaning it's costlier to run.

So why should you have your air conditioning checked?

If your air conditioning system isn't checked and serviced regularly it can deteriorate, causing:

- » Increasing difficulty in maintaining a comfortable temperature
- » Musty or damp odours, as bacteria builds up inside the system
- » Windows steaming up when it is damp outside
- » An escape of refrigerant gas, leading to inefficient operation and increased fuel consumption

Peugeot Recommends:

An annual check and treatment of your air conditioning system which will ensure optimum efficiency and inhibit the growth of bacteria that cause unpleasant odours.

We offer two levels of service, depending on whether you just want to check and cleanse your air conditioning or would like a full air conditioning service:

1. Check & Treatment

This includes:

- » Heater control check
- » Internal blower speeds check
- » Pollen filter check
- » Drive belt condition and tension check
- » Air conditioning treatment, which neutralises unpleasant odours and restricts the growth of bacteria that can cause sneezing and sore throats.

2. Full Service

This includes all the elements of a Check & Treatment plus:

- » Refrigerant gas is drained and renewed
- » Temperature of refrigerated air in cabin is checked
- » System hoses, joints and components are checked
- » Cooling fan operation is checked
- » Replacement of oil within the system.

We always recommend having your service carried out by an authorised Peugeot Dealer.
